Acknowledgments

Huge thanks to Lisa Guerin and Stephanie Bornstein for their crack editing and hard work pulling this book into shape, and for their kindness in trying to keep me on schedule.

Thanks to Jake Warner for everything: your ten-minute voicemail messages; your helpful advice when I was stuck; even the swarms of questions scrawled all over the first draft. I'll deeply miss working with you.

Thanks to Janet Portman, Beth Laurence, and the rest of the Nolo editors for welcoming me back on the team during my extended stay in Berkeley. Thanks also to Ilona Bray for sharing her nonprofit fundraising info with me.

Thanks to Betsy Erbaugh, Katayoon Kia, Sara Jamieson, and Melina Salvador for research and all sorts of other help along the way.

Loving thanks to my parents, Kay and Reza Pakroo, my sister Zara Pakroo, and my grandmother Eunice Jones for cheering me on throughout.

Thanks to Sue Moon and Sandy de Lissoy for warmly welcoming me to Grant St. for my book editing retreat.

Thanks to all the folks who contributed to the book: Randolph Belle, David Dabney, Erika Harding, Michael Hohner, David Kaseman, Giovanna Rossi, and Mona Lisa Wallace. Your real-world experience is a real asset to the book.

Thanks and love to my homegirls, now scattered across red and blue states alike: Alexis Mollomo, Stacey Stickler, Laura Louise Taylor, and Carolyn Nelson. I'd be lost without you. Love also goes to my beautiful friends Inga Muscio and Samantha Campostrini-Medeiros, and to my identical cousin Parisha Pakroo.

Thanks to WFMU (www.wfmua.org) for providing the soundtrack. Freedom is freeform!

Thanks to Flying Star for allowing me to escape my lonely home office and letting me write and edit this book for countless hours in your cheerful café. Juno and I are grateful for the Petio and all the tasty snacks.

Oceans of love and thanks to Turtle, my very best friend. You make my heart swell every day.
